Boalum

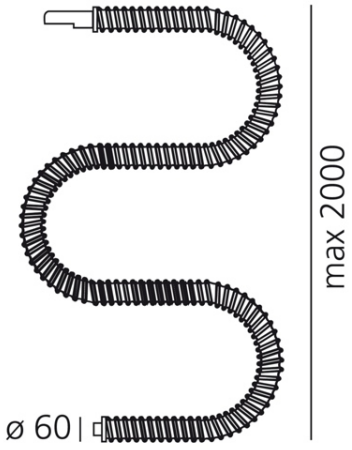

by Livio Castiglioni and Gianfranco Frattini

Described by Domus as "a snake of endless light," Boalum is a luminous icon born in 1970 from the creative minds of Livio Castiglioni and Gianfranco Frattini. Its flexible, translucent PVC body, reinforced and capped with resin, offers both durability and playful versatility. Boalum can be coiled, draped, or suspended, adapting effortlessly to any space. Whether placed on the floor, wrapped around a fixture, or arranged on a table, it invites interaction and creativity. Its soft, diffused glow adds atmosphere without overwhelming, making it ideal for both statement and subtle lighting. Reissued with high-efficiency LEDs, Boalum retains its original charm while embracing modern performance. Celebrated in design museums worldwide, including the Museum of Modern Art in Philadelphia and the Museum of Italian Design in Milan, it remains a timeless piece of Italian lighting history.
