Furin Pendant Light System

by Kengo Kuma

Furin, the Japanese word for 'wind chime', is a suspension system consisting of aluminum tube elements in which an LED light source is held. The pendants can be arranged along an electrical binary system or attached in groups to a ceiling rose. The system involves the use of tubes of differing lengths to create personalised designs, or to obtain a ground-line light effect: a wall of light. The Furin is available in matte white or a red textile finish, with other finishes available on request. The minimalist contemporary design and wide array of customisation options make the Furin an excellent choice for feature lighting in large scale commercial applications.
